AGENCY HISTORY¹

The Rotch Travelling Scholarship was founded in 1883 by the children of Benjamin Smith Rotch of Milton, Massachusetts. As the first organization of its kind in the United States, the scholarship enabled young American architects and talented draftsmen to embark on the professional equivalent of the Grand Tour to study art and architecture in Europe. To that end, an endowment of $50,000 was provided by the Indenture of Trust, signed on December 29, 1883, by the Rotch heirs. The first trustees of the scholarship were Arthur Rotch (president, 1883-1894), William J. Rotch, and William Rotch (treasurer, 1883-1925). In 1911, the Rotch Travelling Scholarship was incorporated as a charitable corporation in the state of Massachusetts. Members of the Rotch family continued playing an active role in the organization. They served as trustees and members of the Rotch Travelling Scholarship Corporation for more than one hundred years, until the deaths in 1989 of descendents Aimee Lamb and her sister Rosamond Lamb.

The Rotch Travelling Scholarship is governed by a board of trustees, who elect its president, secretary, and treasurer. While the trustees control investments of the property of the corporation, the Rotch Travelling Committee, under the auspices of the Boston Society of Architects, administers activities related to annual competitions and selection of qualified applicants. The secretary of the Rotch Travelling Committee is also a secretary of the corporation, providing a close connection between the committee and the board of trustees and members of the corporation. The scholarship has been awarded annually since 1884, except for two intervals due to World War I (1918-1919) and World War II (1942-1945). Applications are accepted from a pool of young applicants, below 35 years of age, who hold American citizenship. In addition, candidates must have a degree from an accredited U.S. school of architecture and at least one year of full-time professional experience in Massachusetts. Alternatively, they may have a degree from an accredited Massachusetts school of architecture and one year of full-time professional experience in any architectural firm.

In 1883, the trustees of the newly-founded scholarship asked the members of the Boston Society of Architects to assist them in developing a scheme for annual selection of the best candidates. In response, the Boston Society of Architects appointed the Rotch Travelling Scholarship Committee. The first members of the committee included Edward C. Cabot, Edmund M. Wheelwright, Arthur Rotch, Charles A. Cummings, and Robert S. Peabody. Initially, the applicants were required to prove their knowledge of architectural history, construction, French, and drawing from casts. A two-level design competition, consisting of preliminary and final examinations, was introduced in 1892 and remains in use today (2002). The purpose of the preliminary exam has been to narrow down the pool of candidates to those with the best “architectural and imaginative potential.” The winner of the final competition is awarded the title “Rotch Scholar” for a given year. In case the Rotch Scholar is unable to travel, travel funds are made available to the Alternate to the Winner. Occasionally, a jury has selected a Second Rotch Scholar, providing financial support enabling travel for a shorter period. The recipient of the first scholarship, in 1884, received $2,000 for two years of travel. At present (2002), a Rotch Scholar is awarded $35,000 for travel abroad of at least eight months duration, while a Second Rotch Scholar, if selected, receives $15,000.

¹The agency history was based on the following: Clarence Thomas Blackall, A History of the Rotch Travelling Scholarship, 1883 to 1938 (Boston: Privately Printed, 1938); The Rotch Travelling Scholarship: A Review of Its History, 1883-1963 ([Boston]: Privately Printed, 1963); The Rotch Travelling Scholarship (Boston: The Rotch Travelling Scholarship, Inc., 1980); and the records included in the collection.

In the past, the scholars were expected to present, at the completion of their travel, carefully studied, measured, and rendered drawings (envois) of selected examples of European architecture. Those requirements were based on what was expected by the French Academy in Rome from the recipients of the Grand Prix de Rome. As time passed, those obligations changed. In the early 1950s, they were reduced to sending “reasonably frequent letters to the Secretary.” By the early 1960s, the trustees found this situation unsatisfactory and introduced a new set of requirements. In addition to monthly reports, the scholars were to provide the secretary with their travel itineraries and prepare, upon their return, a final report with sketches and/or photographs. Since then, submittal and acceptance of such a report has become a condition for receiving the Rotch Scholar certificate and the final installment of the scholarship.

The Rotch Travelling Scholarship proved to have a great impact on the development of the professional careers of many American architects. Through the work of its recipients, it has influenced the evolution of the entire architectural profession in the United States for more than one hundred years. A list of the winners includes names of many of the most distinguished American architects: Henry Bacon (1889), designer of the Lincoln Memorial; Harold Van Buren Magonigle (1894), designer of the United States Embassy in Tokyo; Ralph Thomas Walker (1916), Hayden Memorial Library at MIT; Wallace Kirkman Harrison (1922), Rockefeller Center and United Nations Buildings; Louis Skidmore (1926); Edward D. Stone (1927); Gordon Bunshaft (1935); Victor A. Lundy (1948); and many others. In 1992, Debi L. McDonald became the first woman awarded the scholarship.

PROVENANCE NOTE

The records of the Rotch Travelling Scholarship, prior to their transfer to the Institute Archives, were kept in the office of Hugh Shepley, the secretary of the Rotch Travelling Scholarship Committee and the corporation secretary between 1988 and 1995. In 1998, Jonathan R. Phillips, the president of the board of trustees of the Rotch Travelling Scholarship, Inc., gave the collection to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The records were arranged and packed in the offices of Shepley, Bulfinch, Richardson, and Abbott in the fall of 1997, and transferred to the Institute Archives by Hugh Shepley in February 1998.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The collection documents the history of the Rotch Travelling Scholarship from the founding of the organization in 1883 through the mid-1990s. The records include minutes of meetings, correspondence, financial records, reports, photographs, clippings, scrapbooks, and published volumes. The major part of the collection, documenting annual competitions, consists of competition programs, photographic documentation of the winning entries, travel itineraries, scholars' travel diaries, and final reports. While the records created or compiled at the office of the secretary of the Rotch Travelling Scholarship Committee go back to the 1880s, the records created by the scholarship recipients fall mainly between the 1950s and the 1990s. The Rotch Travelling Scholarship collection represents a nearly continuous record documenting the evolving trends of post-graduate architectural education in America for over one hundred years, providing valuable source material for those interested in the history of architecture in the United States. In particular, it will be of value to researchers tracing the impact of different architectural movements and ideas in shaping early perceptions, artistic interests, and future careers of individual architects.

The impact of the initial educational approach, based on the program of the Ecole des Beaux-Arts in Paris, is evident in carefully rendered architectural details depicted in envois submitted by the early scholars. While the original drawings were returned to the scholarship recipients or loaned to various institutions, "Life Records and Envois" (Series III), compiled by the secretary of the Rotch Travelling Scholarship Committee, provide photographic documentation of the envois received through 1954. Those visual records, later augmented by the original drawings, sketches, and photographs included in scholars' diaries and final reports, can be examined to trace the influence of modernism, the growing emphasis on historical solutions to architectural and urban planning problems, and increasing interests in vernacular architecture. Those changing trends can also be studied by looking through the design solutions to competition problems. Competition programs, written by practicing architects and educators, are available for the 1930s and later, and photographs of the winning entries for the 1960s and beyond.

Scholars' monthly letters (travel diaries) and final reports constitute a unique set of documents describing impressions of architects at the onset of their professional careers. Travel diaries, available for the 1950s and later, and scholars' final reports, available for the 1970s and beyond, can be found in Series II, Administrative and Annual Competition Files. In the early decades, travel was limited to several countries in Europe, mainly France, Italy, and Greece, but also Germany, Spain, and England. Travel plans of the later scholars reflect a shifting emphasis away from looking at the established art monuments in Europe to exploration of other cultures and civilizations (the Far East, South America, and Australia). The itineraries for travels from 1884 through 1954 were documented by the secretary of the Rotch Travelling Scholarship Committee and compiled in "Life Records and Envois" (Series III). From the 1950s and later, itineraries can be found among the records of individual Rotch Scholars, filed under their names, in Series II, Administrative and Annual Competition Files.

The annual competition process is documented through the reports of the Rotch Travelling Committee, jury reports, competition programs available for the 1930s and beyond, and photographs of the winning entries available for the 1960s and later. The administrative records provide valuable material documenting governing functions and administrative activities of the corporation, board of trustees, and the Rotch Travelling Scholarship Committee. Administrative records can also shed light on further activities of many scholarship recipients and other prominent architects and educators, who frequently became actively involved in the work of the organization, serving as program writers, jury members, members of the corporation, trustees and officers. For example, Clarence Howard Blackall, the first Rotch Scholar, became the first permanent secretary of the Rotch Travelling Scholarship Committee and the secretary of the trust (the corporation, from 1911), holding both positions from 1891 through 1940. He was succeeded by William Emerson, who served as the second secretary from 1940 through 1954, after his retirement in 1939 as dean of MIT's School of Architecture.

SERIES DESCRIPTIONS

SERIES I. ROTCH TRAVELLING SCHOLARSHIP COMMITTEE RECORDS, 1883-1996

Series I contains records compiled by the office of the secretary of the Rotch Travelling Scholarship Committee. The materials include minutes of the committee meetings, annual reports of the secretary, reports on awards of the scholarship, reports of the jury, and other pertinent material. Five bound volumes of "Minutes" (box 1, folders 1-4, and box 2, folder 1) cover a period of seventy years, from 1883 through 1954. Minutes and reports from 1954 through 1996 can be found in box 2, folder 2.

SERIES II. ADMINISTRATIVE AND ANNUAL COMPETITION FILES, 1911-1996

Series II contains records compiled by the secretary of the Rotch Travelling Scholarship, Inc. It consists of the records reflecting functions of the corporation and the board of trustees. It also documents annual competitions as reported by the Rotch Travelling Scholarship Committee, a body responsible for conducting examinations, selecting candidates, and overseeing scholars' travels. In addition, there are monthly letters (travel diaries) and final reports created by the scholarship winners in the course of their travels. These documents, after their submission to the corporation secretary, became the property of the Rotch Travelling Scholarship, Inc.

While the records in Series II appear to fall into three distinct categories, the materials are filed in one chronological sequence, the arrangement at the time of their transfer to the Institute Archives. Some minor reordering of the records was necessary, mainly interfiling competition photographs and final reports, to preserve the logical arrangement of records in the series.

The first category, labeled administrative files, consists of correspondence, memoranda, financial statements, reports of the secretary of the Rotch Travelling Scholarship Committee and of the corporation secretary, minutes of the meetings of the corporation and board of trustees, candidate applications, and jury notes and reports. Meeting minutes of the Rotch Travelling Scholarship Committee and annual reports of its secretary in Series II are mostly duplicate copies of record copies filed in Series I.

The second category consists of competition programs, documented by the Rotch Travelling Committee starting in the 1930s. In addition, there are photographic records of the winning entries, available for the 1960s and beyond

The third category, filed under the names of individual scholars, includes correspondence, travel itineraries, letters and diaries, and final reports. It may also include some background information regarding the further careers of the winners, documented by the secretary of the Rotch Travelling Committee. Records related to other winners, Alternates to the Winner or Second Rotch Scholars, are also filed under the names of individuals. Scholars' final reports are available for years starting in 1970.

SERIES III. "LIFE RECORDS AND ENVOIS," 1884-1954

"Life records and envois" were created in the office of the secretary of the Rotch Travelling Scholarship Committee for the corporation as an official record documenting each of the scholarship recipients between 1884 and 1954. Three record books (box 27, folders 1-3) and corresponding photo-albums (boxes 28-30) contain information about the individual winners, their travel itineraries, descriptions and photographs of their envois, and often information about their subsequent professional careers. Envois, notes, and sketches from travels before 1900 are available in three published monographs (boxes 32-39). Series III also contains miscellaneous unidentified travel sketches created by scholarship recipients during their travels (box 31, folders 1-2).

SERIES IV. ROTCH TRAVELLING SCHOLARSHIP HISTORICAL MATERIAL, 1883-1995

Series IV consists of miscellaneous materials, both published and unpublished, documenting the history of the Rotch Travelling Scholarship. It includes a volume with biographical profiles and photographic portraits of the founders and the first fifty scholarship recipients (box 40), historical accounts published in 1938 and 1980 (box 44, folders 4 and 5), scrapbooks with newspaper and magazine clippings, and other materials related to specific events commemorating the history of the organization. Bylaws and other related documents are located in box 44, folder 1. In addition, there are biographical sketches of the scholarship recipients between 1884 and 1934, compiled by Clarence Howard Blackall (the secretary between 1891 and 1940). Those sketches can be found in box 44, folder 3. Among Blackall's notes and correspondence (box 44, folder 2) there is a letter sent in 1882 by Henry Bacon to William Robert Ware, in which Bacon discussed plans for the future travelling scholarship. Also, there are lists of the Rotch Travelling Scholarship Committee members, members of the jury, program writers, and winners (box 44, folders 6-9).
